

PALLIATIVE PERSPECTIVES

Approaches to Family Nursing in Oncology: an International Comparison

SUMMARY:

Cancer is not only a stressful event for those afflicted, but also for family and friends and the broader social surrounding. As a response to this insight, approaches to family nursing were developed in some countries. Using an international comparison approach, this qualitative doctoral research project aims to investigate different approaches and conceptualizations of family nursing in oncology. This study will be conducted in Canada, Switzerland and Germany because in these countries different approaches to family nursing were developed and implemented. The goal of this study is to increase knowledge on different conceptualizations of family nursing and to promote mutual learning. Findings will help to make recommendations for improving family nursing in these three countries.
